A systematic approach to training encompasses not only training development, but how your training program identifies and meets your organization's needs. Whether you have been complying with PER-005 or simply trying to build an effective training program, SOS can help you identify gaps and improve performance to maximize your employees' potential and improve grid reliability.

Our experience in both compliance and training ensures we understand the work necessary to meet the requirements and enhance your training program.

Through our audit experience, we have identified auditors' concerns and can help you prepare and manage documents and evidence for a smoother audit process.

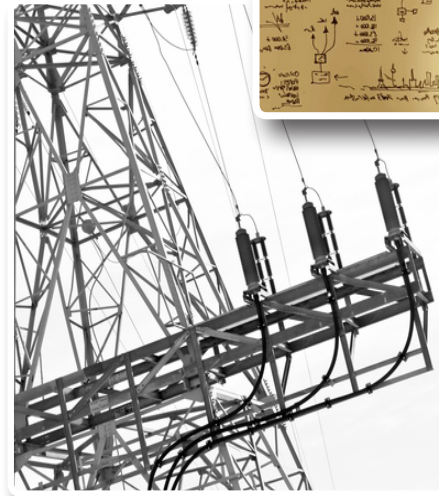

SOS will look at areas including:

- Gap analysis and mock audit - What missing pieces are negatively affecting your training program's performance? Are you prepared for your next audit?
- Your task list – do you have it in the correct format? Is it organized to easily provide evidence?
- Your capability assessments – are you prepared to demonstrate your operators' capability to perform tasks?
- Your program documents – have you sufficiently described your training program including your company-specific definitions, systematic approach to training, etc.?
- Documentation - How do you document and evaluate your training programs and processes?

Regardless of the training tracking tool you use, we work closely with you to make sure you have the training records and documentation you need.

Managing a training program is an evolutionary process. As your program grows, it is important to focus on the steps to build a mature program. The SOS team will work with you every step of the way as you build your training program capability.

Contact us today to determine your PER-005 preparedness and build your training program maturity.
